Javier de las Peñas

- Born in Granada, living in Malaga (Spain). He began his preparation in different academies, receiving classes from the painter Raimundo Alarcón, then continuing his training self-taught. He combines painting with the University, graduating in Law. He began working on figuration until a stay in Paris in the seventies allowed him to delve deeper into avant-garde movements, gradually abandoning figuration and drifting towards abstract expressionism, working with materials such as burlap, cardboard, wood or sand, close to the Japanese philosophy of Wabi-Sabi, the appreciation of imperfection, of the transitory, of simplicity or simply of the natural.
- This path ends up leading him to the full freedom of abstraction in an attempt to penetrate unknown spaces, trying to paint the unconscious as an unpolluted area; the sign and color as a tautology of life, trying to convert air, energy, desire, joy, pain, light into paint, penetrating the states of the soul like a unique big bang where harmony is installed. After a long period of reluctance to participate in public exhibitions and exhibitions, he resumed exhibition activity at the beginning of the 2010s. In recent years, in parallel with his purely pictorial work, he has worked in the paths of digital art, executing, for example, mixing his paintings. with iconic images of the great masters, architecture or pure abstractions passed through the sieve of the digital.
